In the early 1940s, Cobb served as 1st Lieutenant in the Atlantic convoys. From 1943-45, he commanded MTBs, working in the North Sea. A great lover of the sea, Cobb lived on his yacht White Heather, which was normally based at Brockenhurst in Hampshire. After the war David Cobb came to Newlyn's old harbour with his wife Jean. She was pregnant and DW's grandmother Mrs Mary Williams of Fore Street (wife of retired fisherman and boat owner William Henry Williams) was concerned. She offered them the use of a cottage adjoining her home and the couple lived there for a time at the birth of their child. Cobb began his painting career at Newlyn and then worked in the Sussex village of Itchenor (where he lived for some years) until he moved to live near Brockenhurst in the New Forest in the 1950s. He later became President of the Royal Society of Marine Artists and did some magnificent paintings of ships and the sea. Both David and Jean are now dead. He did not return to the village - but there are a few of his works done at this time in the area. Jean died in 2008.Cobb died on 18 June 2014.
